PREMIUM DRY-AGED STEAKS

Our offer now includes unique steaks from Podlasie. Hereford cows are fed with hay and grass, and in winter mainly with corn, which significantly improves the quality of the steaks. The meat is very tender, delicate with a noticeable hint of sweetness. At NINE's we serve steaks from heifers, because their meat is much more delicate than from bulls. We offer both dry and wet seasoned steaks.

WET SEASONING

This is the most popular method of seasoning. Selected pieces of meat are vacuum-sealed in special bags. Such elements are stored in a cold room and aged for about 14 days. During this time, the enzymes found in the meat, under the influence of natural biochemical reactions, change the structure of the meat. It becomes more loose, brittle and delicate.

DRY SEASONING

The meat is seasoned with the bone, which ensures that the structure of the muscles is maintained. The bone is also a factor causing condensation of the beef flavor. Such seasoning also eliminates the shrinkage of muscle fibers during frying, which affects the tenderness of the meat. The meat is hung in refrigerators with special conditions: temperature 2-4 degrees Celsius, humidity 80-86% forced air circulation. During dry aging, significant weight loss occurs due to the evaporation of water in the plasma. The loss ranges from 25-50%. Dry aging is considered a more noble method because it develops the flavor and aroma of the meat better.
